"Pavel has worked on a number of IT projects for us at Muze. His personable demeanor, creativity, and professionalism have made him a pleasure to work with, and I would definitely consider him for future projects here at Muze."

"It is no exaggeration to say that Pavel Gnitetskiy rescued our Company, TasteSpace.com, from failure. Having encountered several insurmountable problems with the platform we were developing, we made one last effort to contract an individual to repair our website. We decided to hire Pavel because of his no-nonsense approach and clear understanding of the problems at hand. Within two days of joining the Company, Pavel made the firm assessment that our platform needed to be totally revamped. After laying out a detailed proposal for how he would rebuild the site, he literally constructed a new website from scratch, relying solely on our occasional direction and the design of the previous site version. For additional compensation, Pavel worked several 48-hour work days, and ultimately submitted a revamped product two full days before his estimated deadline. Pavel left the Company soon after, as he was interested in challenging projects and exciting opportunities. Though he agreed to provide a maintenance plan for his product, his stated costs were far too high for us to accept. However, he did locate for us a programmer who could take his place, understand his work, and build upon his success. We hired that individual, and were very pleased with his work. Pavel is incredibly driven, incredibly talented, and incredibly smart. He is a rigid negotiator, and is very firm about the compensation he believes he should be granted for his work. That said, if you can afford him, are strict in demanding your product's requirements, and are clear about the contractual terms of the relationship, I am entirely confident that you will not find better work or speed anywhere. Pavel was a pleasure to work with, and a remarkable asset to our project."

"He doesn't sleep not even after the project was done. He was wide awake ready to take on the next challenge. One of the most competitive people I've met to date. Honesty is his greatest weapon what you see is what you get and it's always excellent work. Pave passion for perfection is what have attracted me on going into business with him."
